However after all, the fact may be diſputed. An ance has been related to us by a trader, and we e ſeen the ſquaw in Pittſburgh, whoſe huſband ſo paſſionately enamoured of her, that ſitting one oppoſite to her in his wigwam, gazing on her ſup- l beauty, he ſuddenly ſtarted up and ſeizing her e noſe with his teeth, while ſhe, without op- ſion or remonſtrance, permitted it, bit it off. On r deſiring afterwards to know the cauſe of this treat- ent, he told her that he thought her ſo beautiful hat he was apprehenſive ſome others might alſo love er; but that now though he could ſtill love her as much as before, yet others might not. At the ſame time acknowledging that he never had the leaſt cauſe of jealouſy from any part of her behaviour.

An inſtance happened about two weeks ago of the heighth of this paſſion, where it is ſuppoſed there was ſome reaſon. An Indian, well known in this town to the traders, was jealous of his wife, and declared to his tribe, that he could not ſupport life, and accordingly on the weſtern bank of the Alleghany in the bottom oppoſite the town of Pittſburgh, ſhot himſelf dead. This muſt evince great ſtrength of love, which, as Shakeſpear ſays,

“ Sees Helen's beauty in a brow of Egypt.”

For according to Butler in his Hudibras,

“ He that hangs or beats out brains,
“ The devil's in him if he feigns.”

In ſhort, as all the other paſſions are equally ſtrong in a ſavage, or more ſo than with us, why not thoſe of love and jealouſy alſo? We could wiſh to ſee ſome philoſopher take up the ſubject.

From the 6th of July laſt to the 10th inſtant, the following peltry was bought up by one trader in this place from the Indians, and moſtly paid for in whiſky and flour:

2173	ſummer	deer-ſkins
74	fall ditto	ditto
48	fawn	ditto
94	bear	ditto
37	elk	ditto

29	fiſhers	ditto
14	martins	ditto
15	wild catt	ditto
17	wolves	ditto
16	panther	ditto

Query. What muſt the whole Indian trade of this place amount to during that time, or for one year; what the advantages of the Indian trade to this town nd the country adjacent?

Extract of a letter from an officer ſtationed at the Miami, to a gentleman at Muſkinghum.

My Good Friend.

“ Our ſituation is ſo remote from the inhabited world, that we are totally deſtitute of materials to fill p a letter, my preſent is only a letter of friendſhip, ogether with an account of an adventure that happen- d to me ſome days ago. One morning very early I eft the garriſon with my fuſil and a couple of fiſhing ines, one of which was exceedingly ſtrong. I proceeded near 20 miles on the north ſide of the Ohio river, amuſing myſelf killing ſquirrels, a few pigeons, nd admiring the works of nature: about ſun down I rrived on the margin of the river, and obſerved an eddy a little below me, which, by its depth and promiſing appearance, invited me to throw in my lines; being there for ſome time without ſucceſs, I reſolved to prepare my bed for the night, which conſiſted of pea vine and large oak leaves; I alſo built me a ſmall fire, calculated to keep off the muſkitoes, who are generally very troubleſome in the evening, and to light my pipe, for you know I am very fond of ſmoaking; all this being done, I concluded that I would tie my lines juſt above my ankle, and indulge myſelf on one of the beſt beds that could be procured in my neighbourhood. Previous to the making of my bed I examined the ground and found that near the edge of the bank was the ſmootheſt place; I was at the ſame time a little apprehenſive of my choice, for the bank was near 20 feet perpendicular, and was of opinion, that if I ſhould by accident fall down it, it certainly would wake me; but you know, my friend, that we ſoldiers don't mind trifles. I fell aſleep, and had not laid there above two hours before I received a violent pull, which brought me on my bottom very ſoon, as you may ſuppoſe, but before I had time to get on my legs, I was down the bank, and would have been dragged into the river, if by good fortune I had not been ſtopped by two midling large rocks, lying about ſix inches from each other, my lines paſſing between the two rocks, brought my poſteriors plum againſt them, which ſtroke diſjointed all the bones in my body, but ſecured my life. You may judge, my dear friend, of my ſituation, not a ſoul to help me in my diſtreſs; however, I muſtered ſufficient courage to remain in my poſition, indeed I could not help myſelf, for my legs projecting to the other ſide of the rocks, rendered me unable to extricate myſelf. I ſuffered a moſt excruciating pain the whole night, wiſhing all the time my lines in poſſeſſion of the merchant from whom I bought them in Philadelphia; at laſt, about 4 o'clock in the morning, finding no reſiſtance on the moving of my leg, I drew it gently, and ſtood ready to pull the lines, which I did with expedition; then finding myſelf diſengaged, I took the line in my hand, and in half an hour of extreme labour, I brought on ſhore a a catfiſh meaſuring twelve feet long, his eyes were two feet a part, and I judge his mouth muſt have been 13 inches in diameter; his ſize was monſtrous, and ſurpaſſed every thing I ever heard of: it is true I had often heard of the catfiſh of the Ohio, but never of the dimenſions that this was. My curioſity led me to open him, and to my great aſtoniſhment found the thigh and leg of a man, which at the firſt ſight appeared to me to reſemble that of an officer; the leg had a boot on; I alſo found one ſide of a regimental blue coat with buff lapells; this ſurpriſed me the moſt, for I know that the officers of the American army had no ſuch coats; all theſe circumſtances raiſed my curioſity and induced me to make farther ſearch. I made a ſecond inciſion into his belly, and there found a ſquare canteen covered with leather, which I broke open, and found two bottles full of liquor, one of ſherry wine, and the other of excellent ſpirit, with a number of other things; you may better conceive my feelings when you conſider the circumſtances relative to this ſcene, than I can expreſs them. I could mention a number of other things, but as the ſtory carries already a completion of improbabilities, I will ſtop here; and believe me, that in my opinion, the greateſt misfortune a man can experience on this river, is to fall from a ſteep bank into the hands of ſuch an unmerciful creature, and I hope, my dear friend, that this will be a ſufficient caution to all thoſe who are fond of fiſhing, and I ſincerely wiſh that it may never be your lot.”

By an extract of a letter from a gentleman at Sanduſky to his friend in Waſhington, we are informed, that on the 10th ult. three men arrived there, by the names of Zerekar, Stokely, and Shaver, and on the next day proceeded to Detroit, and encamped at the Carrying river, from whence they proceeded, leaving Zerekar behind. On their way they met one Abraham Williams coming from Detroit to Sanduſky, who they informed, that a gun went off in the night and ſhot Zerekar in the head and killed him, occaſioned, they ſaid, by the leaves catching fire where the gun was. Williams examined them a good deal, being ſuſpicious of their being the perpetrators of the horrid deed, and enquired in what manner they left him; they ſaid they buried him about a foot thick with dirt, for what was a man after he was dead.---- Upon Williams's arrival at the place, he found him lying on the ground, having never been covered with any thing but an old log. This was about eight days after he was murdered. It is the opinion of every body here that theſe two young fellows killed him on account of theſe two reaſons, viz. Stokely overhearing him tell ſome of the inhabitants reſpecting his ſtealing a negro woman and two children; and the other, that he had a ſum of money with him to purchaſe ſome land.

Waſhington, Auguſt 12, 1786.

The anniverſary of American independence was celebrated near the town of Waſhington, by a conſiderable number of the moſt reſpectable inhabitants of the county, at a fountain iſſuing from the ſide of a hill overſhadowed by a grove of ſpreading oaks, ſugar-tree, locuſt, &c.

A table was ſet in the rural ſtile, which was plentifully furniſhed with pig, lamb, and other decorations, ſuitable to the occaſion. The managers unanimouſly choſe the honorable Dorſey Pentecoſt, Eſq; preſident, the honorable Thomas Scott, eſquire, vice-preſident, David Redick, eſquire, toaſt maſter, captain Samuel Brady commandant of the ſection, doctor David Holmes and captain George M'Cormick were managers. The company heartily partook of the repaſt; after which the following toaſts were drank with decorum, delivered by the preſident to the toaſtmaſter with the greateſt ſolemnity, viz.

1. The Independence of America
2. The United States in Congreſs aſſembled
3. The Illuſtrious Waſhington
4. The King of France, the Friend of Liberty
5. The Memory of the Heroes who fell in the Defence of America
6. May the Union of the Siſter States be perpetual
7. May the Friends of American Liberty be as Independent as they have been Brave
8. May American Commerce flouriſh unfettered
9. May Learning and Religion Illume the Weſtern World
10. Perfect Freedom to the World
11. May the Bravery of that Army which effected our Independence never be forgot
12. The State we live in
13. The Riſing Glories of the Weſt.

At each toaſt the ſection fired with a degree of exactneſs that would have done honor to veteran troops. The higheſt degree of friendſhip and cordiality ſub-on of day and night, and enjoy the ſame degree of light and heat. While I was trembling for the event, and even wiſhing myſelf of any other ſpecies than that of men, my fears were removed by a voice which ſpoke with inexpreſſible benignity, to this effect------"My children of the earth, I forgive theſe inſtances of vain and ignorant preſumption, becauſe I have allotted you but a ſmall portion of knowledge. That portion, however, is ſufficient for your happineſs, if you employ it to the purpoſes for which I gave it. I allowed you a capacity to learn the properties of natural productions, becauſe I intended them to relieve you in natural evils; I ſuffered your knowledge to reach even ſo far as the motion of what you call the heavenly bodies, that you might paſs with more ſecurity from one region to another, connect yourſelves more generally with your fellow creatures, and enjoy the various productions of art and nature, that the different parts of your planet afford. I gave you the power, in many inſtances, of foreſeeing the effect in the cauſe, that you might attend to the moral conſequences of your actions, and be virtuous for the ſake of your own happineſs.----But the knowledge of that would be of no uſe to you, I have not allowed you, becauſe it would withdraw your attention from thoſe objects that require it. Let not the little knowledge I have given you, make you ungrateful--- Creatures that have leſs than you, have not learnt to be ſo." This ſpeech made ſuch an impreſſion upon me, that even after I awaked, I felt it at my ſoul. My heart laboured under the conſciouſneſs of the paternal love of God, and I never knew any ſenſation reſembling it but one, which was when I accidentally overheard my father praying for me.
